

ABSTRACT

An electron tube includes at least one metal film formed on a base, at least one linear member provided above the base, and at least one additional member for connecting said at least one linear member to said at least one metal film. The at least one linear member is connected to the at least one metal film by welding the at least one additional member to the at least one metal film.